To whomever this may concern,

Re: Andre Rogers

Andre worked with Dhruva Interactive for just over one year, and I must admit I was sorry to see him leave. He proved to be a smart engineer with a natural aptitude towards game programming. Always willing to add to his skillset, he was very adept at learning new techniques.

Andre is a hardworking and dedicated employee, willing to put in long hours when required. He is a team player, a good communicator, and somebody always willing to lend a helping hand.

He is still young and on a learning curve, but Andre has both a burning desire and a natural ability for game engineering, and I have no doubt he will achieve substantial results in the near future. I can heartily recommend him.

Yours truly

Subject: Andre Rogers

To whom it may concern,

Andre was part of the Game Studio team at Dhruva for slightly over one year. In that period of time he has demonstrated a strong potential for game programming and clearly understands game products and their specific needs when it comes to the supporting technology.

He has demonstrated the ability to quickly learn new and complex techniques and be a positive team player.

His passion for games has lifted his performance past expectation on several occasions, more than compensating for the need for him to continue to grow and learn to reach full potential.

I enthusiastically recommend Andre Rogers for any team that is looking to add contributing talent.
